Significant Contributions

Part 4 of 4

- Louis Pasteur developed the Germ Theory of Disease, replacing the longstanding belief of miasma, or “bad air”.
- This greatly changed the world, and was the start of modern medical science.
- This lead to his invention of pasteurization, which is used very commonly still today.
- He also discovered chirality.